Renovations by Former Deputy Mayor

A former Binghamton political figure is continuing with his private efforts to revitalize the core of the city---

Monday former Deputy Mayor of the City of Binghamton Rich David was showing off his renovation of 45 Court street.

The three story building hosts M and D-R Nuts and Curry of India on the first floor. David transformed the second and third stories into a one unit loft where he lives.

Other renovations include facade enhancements which David says he hopes will encourage other building purchases and reconstruction.

"There's investments going on on the outside and inside of the building. And anytime the main street of our downtown looks visibly better its going to spur and encourage development because that's how I invested in this building because I saw other people do it," Confluence Ent. President Rich David.

David says his Confluence Enterprises company will soon purchase another building in the downtown area.

David was Deputy Mayor under the Bucci administration.
