Historic buildings in the Southern Tier are being preserved, and it's not going without notice.

The Preservation Association of the Southern Tier held this awards ceremony at the Kilmer Building in downtown Binghamton.

The winners have restored properties consistent with that property's architectural history.

Frank and Lynn Whitney were honored for rehabbing the Kilmer Building.

And, some buildings on Court Street were also recognized.

The Preservation Association says restoration projects like these are becoming more popular.

"We are beginning to realize what great assets we have here in Binghamton with our historic neighborhoods and historic buildings," said Jane DeHawhurt of the Preservation Association of the Southern Tier.

Local students were also honored, for making models of historic landmarks.
